The San Ramon Valley Council of PTAs’ Special Needs Committee Presents

SOCIAL COMMUNICATION
The Impact on Friendships and the Classroom
For most of us, interacting with other people comes naturally. However, for those with conditions such as high-functioning autism, Asperger Syndrome, ADD/ADHD, social anxiety, or other social or self-regulation challenges, this innate ability to think and succeed in everyday social situations is often lacking. For people who face these challenges, social communication must be learned and practiced.

Wednesday, November 20, 2013
7:00 to 9:00 PM
Iron Horse Middle School MPR
12601 Alcosta Blvd., San Ramon, CA 94583

Communications Works (CW) is an innovative Private Center located in the Oakland Hills that provides the highest level of speech, language, social, occupational and emotional regulation therapy services to clients in their center and to surrounding Bay Area communities. Since 2001, they have specialized in social communication and self-regulation for all ages (0-adults) and have taught folks how to communicate and connect. Join Audra L. Elliott, Director of Supervision & Program Development at Communication Works, as she discusses the following:

- Social Communication vs. Social Skills
- Components of Social Communication
- The Impact on Developing Friendships
- Strategies for the Home and Classroom
